

Congressman Pence talked with FOX News' Bill Hemmer regarding the economic stimulus bill that Democrats unveiled today:

Hemmer: You say no more bailouts, I understand that—but do you consider the stimulus package a bailout?

Pence: Well look, the American people know we can't borrow and spend or bail our way back to a growing economy. Not only did the Senate yesterday make it possible for the other half of the bailout to go, but now House Democrats have come forward with a plan that really seems to confirm their belief that a modest amount of tax rebate checks combined with an enormous amount of government spending is the cure for what ails this economy.

Republicans disagree. We believe that the strength of America is found in the resources, the ingenuity of the American people and we need across-the-board tax cuts for businesses, family farmers, and families to make it happen.
